Steven Sanders, executive vice president of marketing and product development at Interactive Brokers, said, “Our integrated financial account concept provides a level of financial management that’s long been lacking. For years, companies tried to create financial supermarkets, but failed because they didn’t use best of breed products and burdened customers with the inconvenience of transferring money back and forth between accounts,” he added. “Now everything from buying and borrowing to earning interest and investing can be done from one account at great rates.”

The Interactive Brokers Debit Mastercard® is currently available to United States residents and is subject to terms and conditions and an application review. More information on rates, fees and how to apply is available at: ibkr.com/message.
